For the past five years, I have spent most of my time developing and designing websites as a freelancer. As part of my services, I have also helped to design identity and logo files for my clients. I like websites with clean, simple and elegant designs and I strive to achieve this design on all of my projects. Besides my efforts to build beautiful websites that entice the eye, I strive to develop websites which meet current web standards increasing accessibility and long-term viability, providing a better experience for each visitor. I believe content is more important than flashy and curly websites, so I mostly develop CSS-based websites with XHTML. That makes possible to build accessible sites for reaching more viewers as well as providing higher search engine rankings.
